Ideas for Adventure Requirements:

1. Use popsicle sticks and string to mark off a 1-foot square area. An area of dirt with sparse plants is better than a manicured yard. A magnifying glass will encourage Scouts to look closely for tiny movements.

2. Shouting out names of birds a Scout knows before going on a search will help get them thinking. Common birds might be robin, duck, goose, chickadee, blackbird, dove, hawk, pigeon, or seagull. <https://tinyurl.com/Backyard-bird-sounds>
3. Planting the tree indoors in a pot until good weather might fit your schedule better.

4. A birdhouse can be made from a milk carton, large food can, or pieces of wood. This is a good opportunity to try out hand tools, following plans, and painting. <https://tinyurl.com/build-a-birdhouse-video>

5. Describing sounds as 'natural' or 'human' when heard can help scouts get a feel for how wild or urban their environment is.
